Forecast for Thursday 10 Jun 2021

Weather: Cloudy at first, with some hill fog likely to affect mainly west facing upslopes, some of this perhaps persisting through the day. Brightening up through the morning elsewhere, with some bright or sunny spells by the afternoon, especially for southern areas of the park. Isolated showers may develop in the afternoon, but these will be light and well scattered. Any showers easing later to leave a dry evening with clear spells before cloud encroaches into the west again around dusk.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: 60% at first, with greatest risk in the west, becoming greater than 90% during the day, with any shower clouds likely to develop well above any summits.

Visibility: Moderate or poor in any cloud at first which may be down to around 400m on western slopes. Becoming very good or excellent during the morning.
